

Over the past several years, there have been significant developments at the state and local levels to better support foster youth on California's college campuses.

Priority status for student housing and class enrollment, along with a wide range of social and academic support including over 80 programs targeting foster youth, are just a few of the resources that current and former foster youth can access on college campuses. It is important that those working with foster youth are capable of connecting them with this critical support.

What types of resources and support are available at community colleges versus 4-years? Are there eligibility requirements? Which programs are specifically for current and former foster youth? What do the new Cooperating Agencies Foster Youth Educational Support programs provide?

These and other questions will be answered on a web seminar hosted by John Burton Advocates for Youth, on the various resources and supports for current and former foster youth at community colleges, California State Universities and University of California campuses.
