

WEB SEMINAR

The Cal Youth Study is the most comprehensive view to date of young people approaching the transition to adulthood from foster care in the wake of the federal Fostering Connections Act, which extended foster care eligibility from age 18 to 21.

Professor Mark Courtney and his colleagues at Chapin Hall have released the third wave of the Cal YOUTH Study which examines the experiences of youth in California who participated in foster care at age 21 and compares these experiences with the same-age general population and foster youth who exited foster care prior to age 21.

Join John Burton Advocates for Youth and Chaplin Hall on this informational webinar where Professor Courtney will walk through what they found.
