IT'S BEEN A DECADE: HOW IS EXTENDED FOSTER CARE WORKING IN CALIFORNIA?

It's been a decade since the extension of foster care to age 21 in California and the CalYOUTH Study has been evaluating its effect each step of the way.

Please join Professor Mark Courtney and John Burton Advocates for Youth on Friday, January 29th from 10:00 to 11:00 a.m. to learn about the results from latest wave of interviews at age 23.

Professor Courtney will present on how youth who participated in extended foster care are faring in a wide range of areas, including housing, health, education and more. The web seminar will be an important opportunity for policy makers and practitioners to understand where extended foster care is benefiting young people and where additional work is required to fulfill its original goals.
